Recruiting for Graduation years 2026, 2027 & 2028

Have you thought of joining the RAF as a Doctor? Did you know you can join us at Medical School, and we can sponsor your medical training.

As part of this you could receive a bursary or a cadetship leading to a career as a RAF Medical Officer. There are additional benefits as a Medical Cadet too, including a salary and a grant to cover tuition fees.

When you apply for a bursary you will be required to join the University Air Squadron linked to your university and then apply for an upgrade to a cadetship for your last 2 years of medical school. You can apply for a cadetship, to cover your penultimate and/ or final year of medical school, without previously having a bursary. Applications for medical sponsorship are welcome between 1st May and 31st October each year.

For undergraduates studying to be doctors and who plan to become RAF Medical Officers, the following options are available:

BURSARIES

Bursaries of £3000 are available from year 2 of a 4-year postgraduate course, year 3 of a standard 5-year course, or year 4 of a 6-year programme.

CADETSHIPS

Cadetships are available in the final 2 years of medical school and offer a salary (circa £20k) in-line with the Armed Forces Pay Review Body, plus tuition fees paid up to £9250, plus up to £1500 for 30 days of training.
